

We Want you to live - Liberia's Fight against Ebola

File Name	Description	Credit
1	It is Fall 2014 ... the height of the Ebola outbreak. By now over 9000 people have died. And everyday hundreds more are still getting infected.	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
2	Ebola Treatment Unit - or ETU - in Liberia's rural Bong County at the height of the outbreak in Fall 2014.	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
3	With every day the outbreak in Bong county continues to grow. And the doctors at the Ebola Treatment Unit – or ETU - are afraid they may soon have to reject new patients.	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
4	Here in Liberia the virus has broken out of the capital, Monrovia ... Ebola is now spreading uncontrolled through the rest of the country.	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
5	Rev. Victor Padmore moderates the town meeting in which one member of the community shall be forgiven for breaking a quarantine order that led to an Ebola outbreak in this village.	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
6	Mabel Musa is a nurse at the Bong County Ebola Treatment Unit	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
7	Every Day, Mabel Musa and her team pick up patients from clearings somewhere deep in the forest	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
8	Every Sunday, Mabel Musa attends church praying for her patients to stop dying from Ebola	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
9	Ebola forces people to abandon some of the deepest traditions of their culture... but slowly they are now reclaiming the rituals of daily life. For Mabel tonight will be the first night she dares to do something she hasn't done in a long time: a night out with her fiancée.	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
10	These converted pick-up trucks are the most reliable way to safely transport highly infectious patients in this difficult terrain.	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
11	One of the two women Mabel Musa is picking up is clinging to a walking stick. She is visibly ill with the symptoms of Ebola. Her name is Ponawenee.	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
12	Ponawenee has been tested Ebola positive. His chance to survive the next few days is less than 50%	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
13	Tawoo's aunt – Ponawenee has died. Everyone is so frightened of the highly infectious bodies that funerals are done quickly, without much ceremony. But a distant relative has come to pay his last respects to Ponawenee.	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
14	Tawoo has been tested Ebola positive. His chance to survive the next few days is less than 50%	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
15	Back in his village, Tawoo still suffers from Ebola. Like all survivors he has problems with his eyes and something strong back pains	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
16	Tawoo and his fellow villagers have lost an entire harvesting season due to Ebola. They are cleaning this piece of land to build rice.	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
17	For Tawoo the long walk home can't happen fast enough. His homecoming is a celebration. The people here blame nobody, Ebola came and no one could prevent it. Together, the villagers are now rebuilding their future.	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
18	Stanley lost his entire family because of a fateful decision he made. He had defied a quarantine order and everyone is now talking about his case.	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
19	Mammie Juah - Stanley's wife - had died the night before and this was her burial.	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
20	Ebola had infected the entire Juah family – Stanley lost his wife and four children to Ebola	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
21	Because Stanley had defied the town chief, who forbade him to bring his son into the community, 26 people became ill. ...And 14 have now died of Ebola.	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
22	Reverend Victor Padmore is driving to the place where Stanley is hiding. He is trying to reintegrate him into his community	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
23	Padmore thinks there may now be a chance for reconciliation. But Stanley's unwillingness to admit he was wrong to break his son out of quarantine remains an obstacle.	(C) DOCDAYS Productions / Carl Gierstorfer
